Campus Service Corps . . .

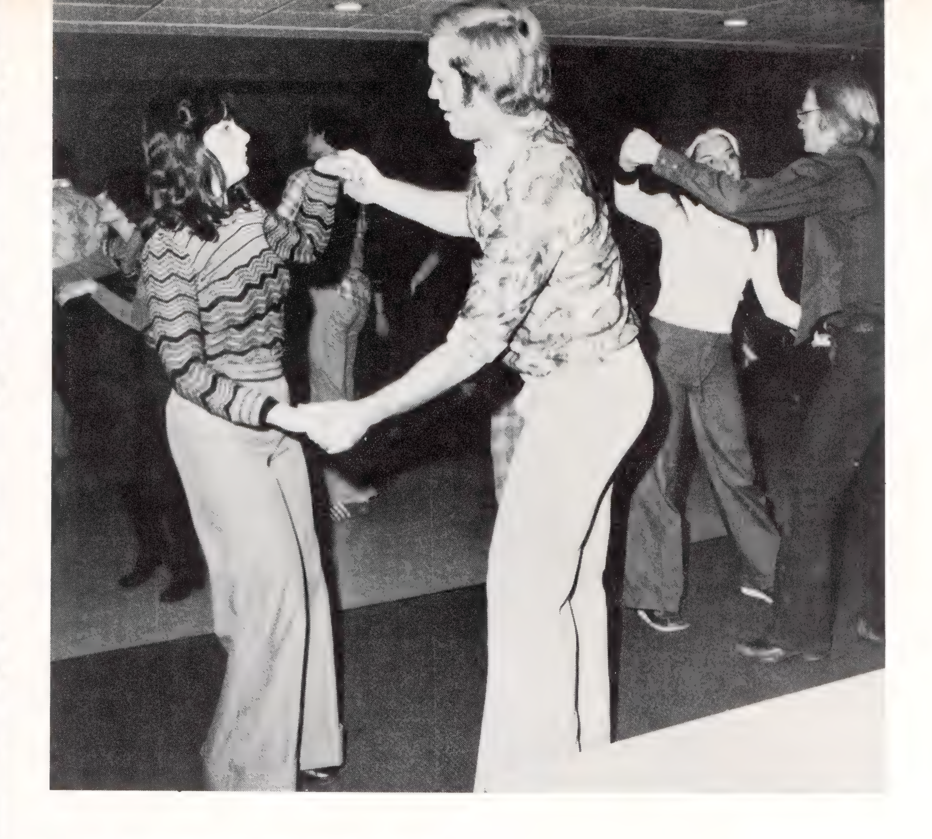

is composed primariy of student volunteers. They serve the Ypsilanti area by establishing various community-oriented programs.
On the far page, Clarence Williams provides companionship for a young man through the Big-Brother program. Other programs in action here are the Big-Sister program (Enjoying a peaceful slumber party), and Adopt-a-Grandparent program.

Another service coordinated by Campus Service Corps is the Hug-A-Baby-Well-Baby Clinic. The clinic is located across from Beyer Hospital.

This handsome little fellow is being weighed and measured free of charge, for mothers who can't afford to take their babies to a regular doctor.

Student Interact Center. . .

is a welcome information center to visitors and students. Among its other activities, the Center sponsors the Parents day, which includes dancing and showing the folks around the ol' campus.

For outstanding students who distinguish themselves at Eastern, the Center will write about them and send the good news homeward to the home paper, high school and parents.

Student Gov't.

Student Government has been involved in many areas this year, ranging from the development of a consistent university-wide evaluation to the revision of the Student Conduct Code and Judicial Structure.

Besides providing the tax clinic, the tenant's union, and a cooperative book exchange, the Student Senate worked to abolish double-charging for physical education hours, and has made progess in the elimination of required activity hours.

The Senate has also helped to create a student art gallery in McKenny Union, and proposed a campus-Arborland bus service. Other projects include the implementation of an academic grievance procedure, and a new plus-minus grading system.

Much attention was focused on Eastern's Affirmative Action Program, with the establishment of a Minority Perspectives committee, and proposals to include women, chicanos, and black dimensions in the academic curriculum. According to Student Body President Anita Regalado, "We are continously striving to effectively represent the diverse student population."

Holy Trinity Lecture Series

The brightly-painted, pillows-on-the-floor atmosphere of the Catacombs of Holy Trinity Chapel provided a unique setting for the Center for Social Concerns. Sponsored by Holy Trinity and United Campus Ministries, the new program brought speakers on controversial issues to the University community. Clockwise, they included: A discussion on world hunger, a lecture on mental health, on cultism, the Rev. James Sinnot speaking on the problem on human liberties in South Korea and the accused Filipino nurses in the Ann Arbor V.A. hospital deaths.

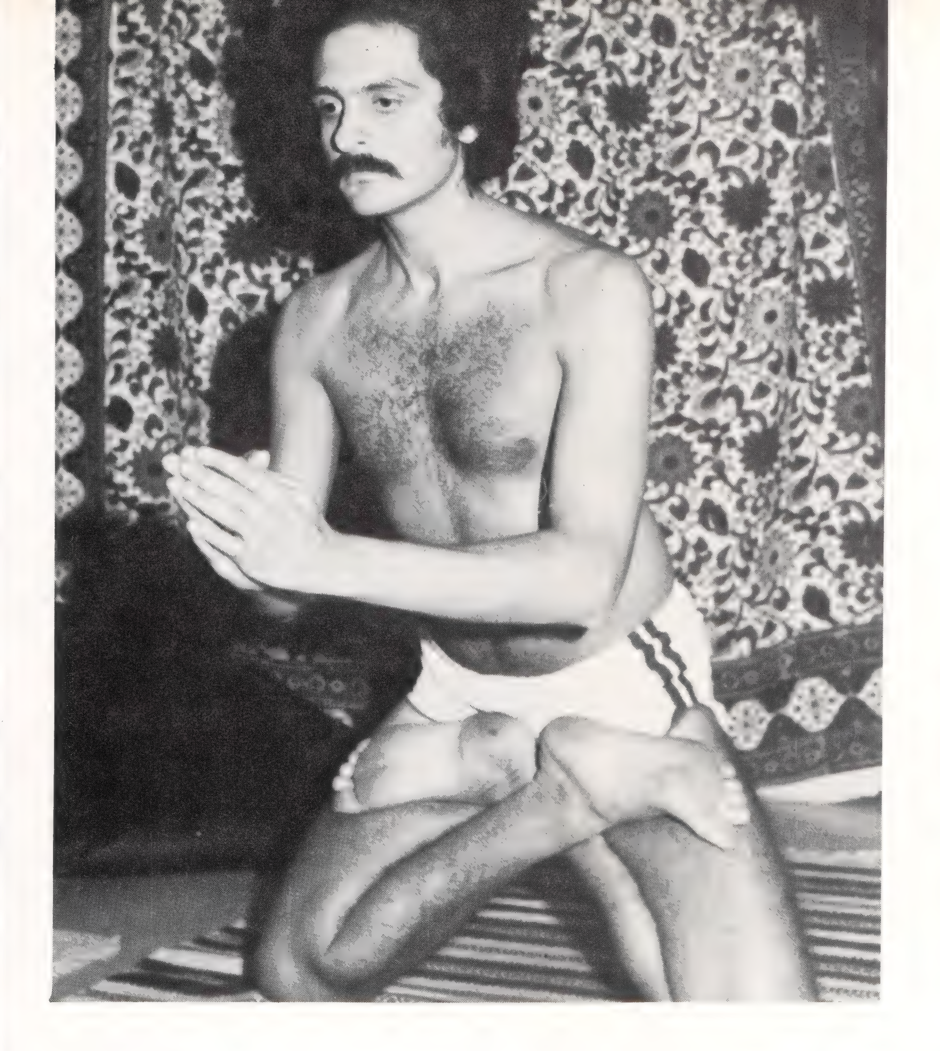

Catalina Club

"Synchronized swimming is like swimming gymnastics," explains Catalina Club President Marie Neu. There are four categories of swimming—solos, duets, trios and team numbers. Done to music, each five-minute routine is comparable to swimming a mile. Sponsored by the Intramural Department, the club competes intercollegiately with regional schools.

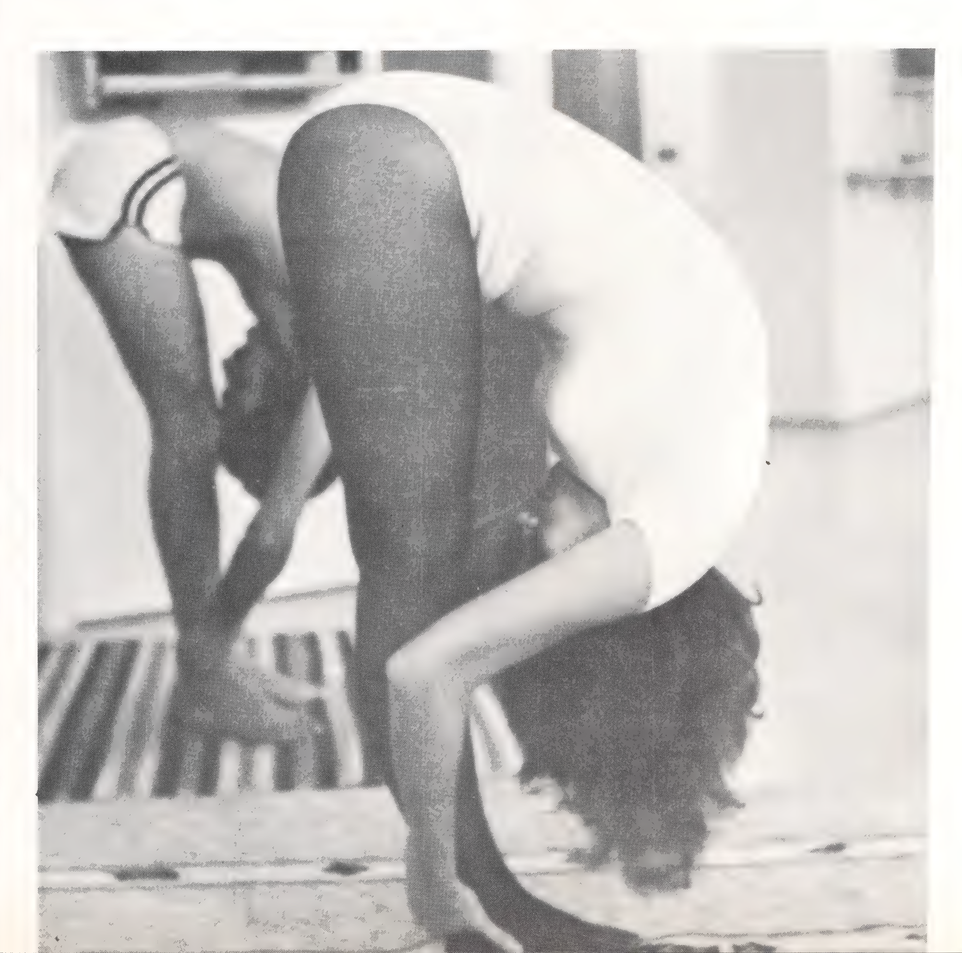

1st row: Paula Nau, April Cogswell, Leslie Tothill, Gina Lukins, Sheila Gibbons.

Yoga

"The Aquarian Yoga Club offers training in Yoga, based on personal experience, which leads to an awareness of the laws of nature," said teacher Rhaled AlAwar. "This will bring about better health, both physical and mental. Activities include practice, study, discussion, lecture and cultural events.

"We are affiliated with a world-wide organization called Universal Great Brotherhood. Our services are dedicated to promote peace and brotherhood among mankind."

Minority Affairs

For Eastern's large minority group population, the Office of Minority Affairs is an active participant in assisting all minority students in their educational and cultural growth.

Roselle Davenport, head of Minority Affairs, stated, ''We work with our students on programming that will add to their success academically and culturally. We work with the admissions office in terms of recruiting. Once students come here, we assist them in terms of their success rate.

''We also have our own newspaper, ''Black Star'' and an admissions publication,'' said Ms. Davenport. Minority Affairs also sponsored Black Awareness Week which featured ''Roots'' author Alex Haley, among other prominent speakers.

Part of the attentive crowd at Alex Haley's talk.

Robert Williams at Holy Trinity Chapel.

Ida Lewis, publisher ''Encore'' magazine.

Marketing Club

More than just statistics and business charts. That's what Eastern's Marketing Club tries to offer its students by bringing in a wide range of speakers and topics to the students.

"Our basic purpose is to supplement what happens in the classroom," said Prof. Ted Smith, head of the Marketing Club. "We have students interact with the professionals of various marketing activities, such as advertising and market research to direct selling in different kinds of industries. We have students spend a day with marketing pros to acquire some on-the-job exposure to what careers are selling. We also try to promote student-faculty interaction with a softball and football game, plus a trip to the Stroh's Brewing Company," concluded Smith.

Among the speakers brought in by the club were Ira Breneman, founder and president of Impact promotions, Lester Heddle, proprietor of Ann Arbor-Craftsmen, Incorporated, and Henry Marks, advertising director of Playboy, Incorporated.

Henry Marks speaks on advertising.

Eastern Michigan is fortunate to have the services of two radio stations available to students: WEMU and WQBR.

Art Timko, station manager of WEMU, stated, "WEMU is an alternative public radio station. We're funded by the state, through the University. We feature in-depth news of the Ypsilanti area plus the only jazz radio many of our listeners can get in this area."

Ric Heliste, Brenda Hines.

Nick Nicholas of Campus Interact leads a tour.

Art Timko, Dennis Hartford.

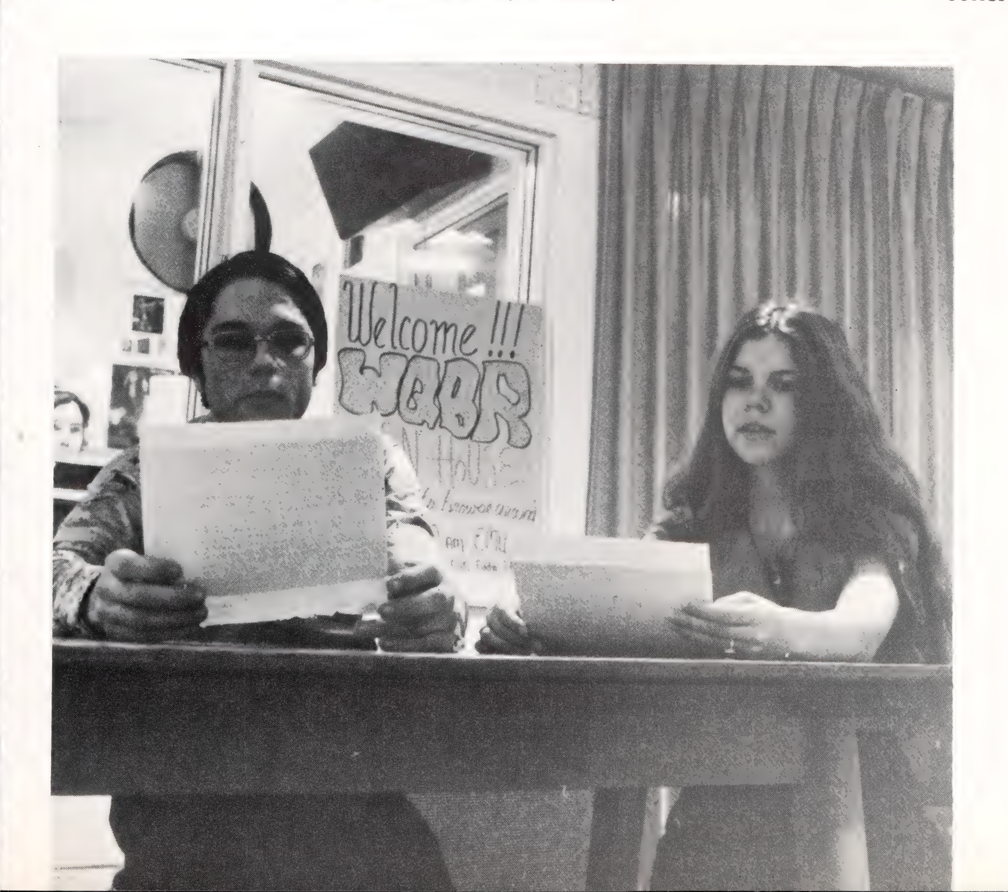

WQBR

Disc Jockey Henry McCauley.

If you want to get your feet wet in the radio business, then WQBR is for you.

"WQBR is run totally by a staff of 40 students, along with our advisor, Prof. Bill Swisher," said station manager John Hawkes. "Students do all of the broadcasts, sports, news, and weather. We also have student program directors and news directors. WQBR is a training ground for students in broadcasting. In the future, we'd like to have interviews with prominent people on campus. We want to become more campus oriented," concluded Hawkes.

Evan Pauley, Lori Crall.

Forensics

Eastern's forensics program, directed by Dennis beagen, is talking about gathering its third national title in seven years and eights in the last 18 years of competition. In the past six years, Eastern's been first twice, second three times, and third once at the National Forensics Tournament, where 160 schools from around the country compete.

"Forensics offers a chance for students in areas of communications skills to grow and excel and compare themselves to others of their ˉown background and interests," stated Beagen. "A lot of students come here because of this program. We've recruited excellent students who help bring national attention to the school and Ypsilanti. It really is the finest program in the country."

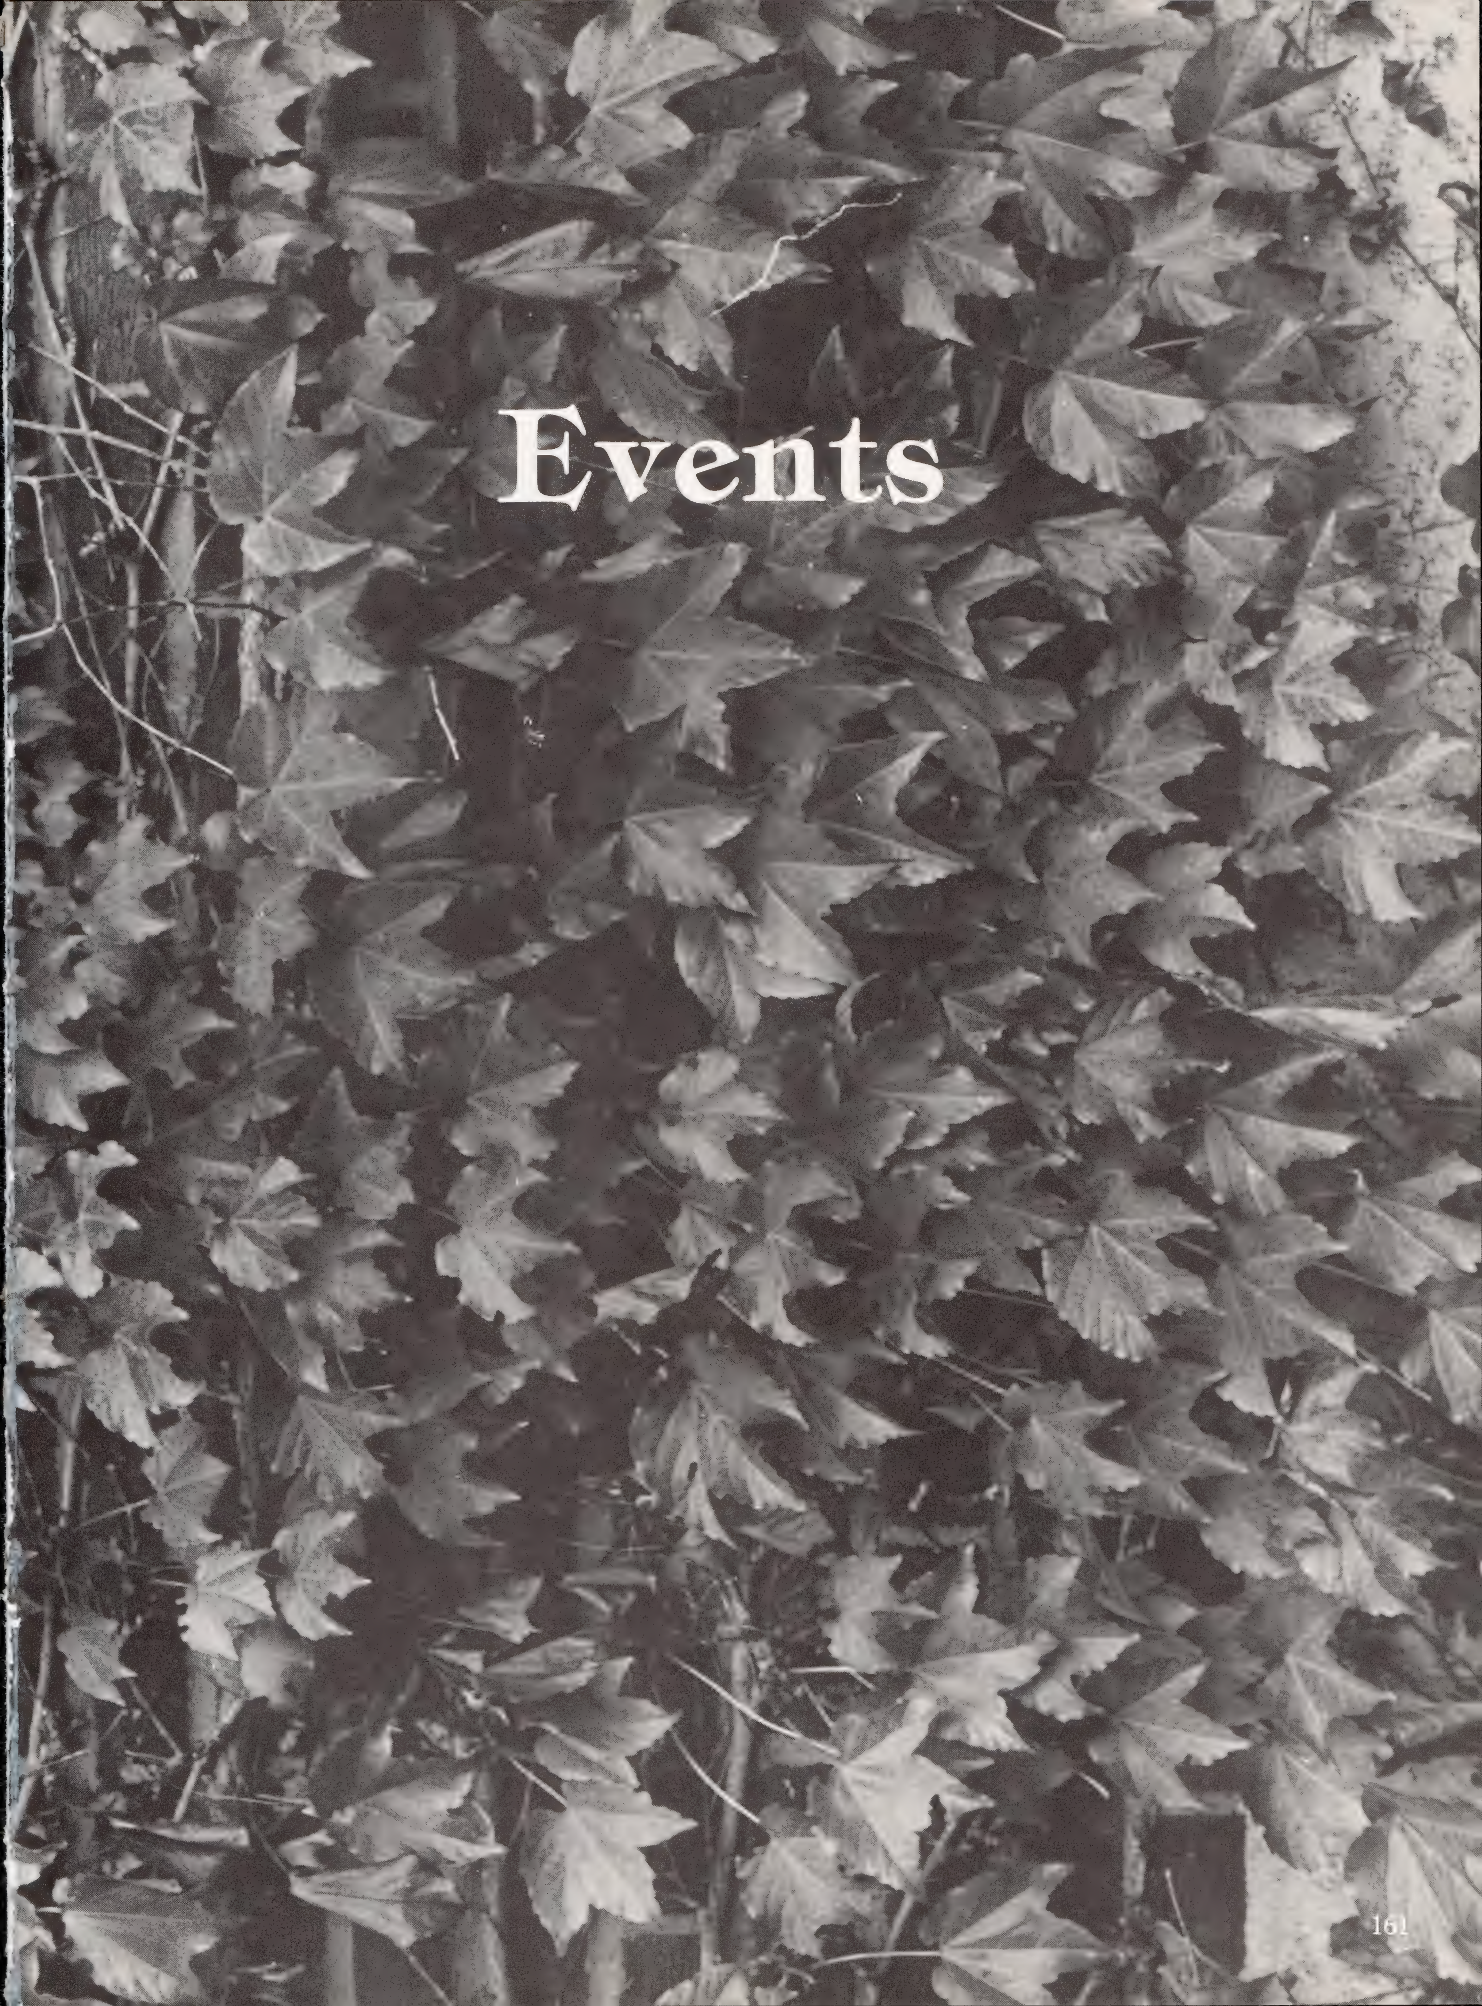

Dean Scortes, Oral Interpretation.

Mike Goodwin, Prose.

Speakers from all over the country came to the Huron Invitational in March.

Alex Haley

Alex Haley, the widely-acclaimed author of "Roots," emphasized the importance of researching ancestry to a crowd of about 3500 people at Bowen Fieldhouse.

Haley did not choose to elaborate on his book, which traces his ancestry on his mother's side. Instead, he spent more time discussing his father.

Before the speech, Haley was presented with a honorary doctoral degree of humane letters by University Regent Mildred Smith.
